1 Level 1 of 3 · Wellness Care

Help that keeps them living on their own, longer.

For the parent who is still doing well, and you'd like to keep it that way. A regular caregiver brings company, good meals, a tidy and safe home, and reasons to get out of the house.

WHY IT MATTERS

Independence is usually lost in small steps.

It rarely ends with one big event. Meals get skipped, the stairs feel harder, friends stop calling, a fall happens when nobody is around. Each of those is something a caregiver can help with, well before more care is needed.

HOW WELLNESS CARE HELPS

Six things a caregiver does that add up to more good years at home.

A mind that stays engaged
Conversation, games, stories, hobbies
Real company, not a check-in from the doorway. Talking and laughing together is good for memory and mood.

Steady on their feet
Walks, gentle movement, getting out
Staying active keeps muscles and balance strong. We make moving part of the visit, at their pace.

Eating well
Meal planning, cooking, grocery runs
When cooking for one gets tiring, meals get skipped. We cook favorites together and leave food for later.

A safer home
Light housekeeping, laundry, clear paths
Clutter and piled-up laundry are trip hazards. A tidy home is a home with fewer falls.

Days that run smoothly
Medication reminders, routines, appointments
A friendly reminder to take medicine, keep the doctor's appointment, and stick to the routine.

Someone who notices
The same familiar caregiver
A caregiver who knows them notices small changes early, so you can act before it becomes a crisis.

A REAL VISIT

What four hours can look like.

Every plan is different. Here's one example for a mom who lives alone.

- 10:00 Coffee together and a catch-up. How did she sleep? Anything on her mind?
- 10:30 A load of laundry, a quick tidy of the kitchen, and the walkway cleared.
- 11:15 Drive to the senior center for lunch with friends and a round of cards.
- 1:15 A stop at the pharmacy and the grocery store on the way home.
- 1:45 Put groceries away, cook a meal for tonight, and a reminder for her afternoon medicine.
- 2:00 See you Thursday. The caregiver writes a short note about the visit.

WHO IT'S FOR

A good fit if they are:

- Living alone and spending a lot of the day by themselves
- No longer driving, or not comfortable driving far
- Skipping meals, or cooking less than they used to
- Getting behind on housework or laundry
- Home from the hospital and getting their strength back
- Fine on their own, but you live far away and worry

> Wellness Care does not include hands-on help like bathing or dressing. If that's needed, Personal Care is the next level.

THE LITTLE THINGS, TOO

Phones & video calls

Help with the phone, TV remote or tablet, and video calls with the grandkids.

Pets & plants

Feeding and walking the dog, the litter box, watering plants, tidying the porch.

Mail & paperwork

Sorting mail, reading letters aloud, bill reminders. We don't handle money or banking.

Memories & hobbies

Photo albums, memory books, crafts, cards to family, holiday decorating.

GOOD DAYS OUT

Care that gets them out the door.

When driving stops, weeks can shrink to the living room. A visit can be lunch and cards at a senior center, the library, or a slow walk through a garden. We drive, stay right beside them, and bring them home. You approve every place.

START BEFORE YOU HAVE TO

The best time to start is while things are going well.

They get to know their caregiver on good days, routines are already in place, and if more help is ever needed, it comes from someone they already trust.

$30 /hour

A minimum of 4 hours per visit and 8 hours per week. Every client gets a personal care plan and a caregiver matched to them.

Best Price Guarantee. For new private-pay clients, we'll beat a comparable written rate from a professional home care agency for your first 6 months. Additional eligibility terms may apply.

Book a free in-home assessment

We come to the home, meet your loved one, and tell you honestly which level fits. No cost and no obligation.
